THE TRAPPER STORY

At Trapper's Sushi, we strive to create a small town atmosphere at each of our locations; we want to get to know the communities we serve. In fact, Trapper encourages all employees to learn at least your name by the time you leave, or in his mind, we haven't done our job.

Trapper O'Keeffe has been preparing sushi since 1993, training under his brother-in-law, Eisuke Sato, at the age of 17 in Reno, Nevada. After Eisuke closed his restaurant, and moved back to Japan, Trapper took what he learned to Washington state. He quickly noticed his style of sushi was very popular, and began searching for an opportunity to open his own restaurant.

In 2004, Trapper opened Sushi Town in Bonney Lake. It wasn't very long before Trapper noticed customers were visiting from throughout Washington, and began to look for opportunities to expand. Trapper's Sushi in Covington, our second location was quickly followed by stores in Puyallup and Kent. Today we're proud to be serving communities all across America!

These days, while you probably won't find Trapper behind the counter making sushi, you will find a dedicated staff who are just as excited to make your dining experience memorable. Trapper greatly appreciates customers taking the time to share their dining experience, and he encourages both regular and new customers alike to reach out and let him know how we're doing with his mission:

"Learn the customer's name and provide the best service and food possible, leaving the customer with a craving to come back to Trapper's Sushi"

-Trapper O'Keeffe
